The orientations of the officials at the helm of the organisation and their professional credentials have constantly affected the nature of design, legislation, and implementation of LKA's programmes. The Lalit Kala Akademi sold his paintings as a special portfolio 1982—83 in all their centenary publications as a landmark in modern art. It was in the mid-60s through the Triennale that the LKA made a statement on the state of arts in India.

The constitutional objectives along with the institutional functioning of the LKA have been reviewed on three occasions by committees appointed by the government of India. The Delhi high court, which heard the PIL alleging misappropriation of funds at the national arts body, had sought an explanation from the ministry on 24 August 2017, however, the ministry did not reply. This was an important moment in India's history of Modern Art as it revelled in the affinity with folk, which seemed to underline an imaginative and technical range that had a richer visual vocabulary that of.
