Workshop on Rural Development and Agrarian Reform

According to the evaluation, some ICT centres were regarded as 'white elephants', which meant that they were not used on a full-time basis. There was room for improvement in relations within and between public sector, private sector and civil society. In addition, inadequate attention was paid to the establishment of sustainable human settlements.

Dr Hall answered that there was a big debate on this issue. The infrastructure policy had been finalised and significant progress had been made with the agri-parks programme. He wanted to know if the proposed business model was appropriate to attract investment, and if the Department saw a need to take drastic measures when dealing with issues of freehold and title deeds, and to clearly identify the shares for people in ventures to attract investments.

Comprehensive Rural Development Programme: Evaluation report by Department of Performance, Monitoring and Evaluation (DPME), with Minister present

Description An impact evaluation of the Comprehensive Agricultural Support Programme CASP was commissioned by the Department of Performance Monitoring and Evaluation DPME in partnership with the Department of Agriculture, Forestry and Fisheries DAFF.

For Ministers who were largely concerned with one outcome, the Performance Agreement was to be based on the high level outputs and metrics associated with that particular outcome. Members asked how Government could assist subsistence farmers in using more natural and less expensive fertilisers, whether credit came from commercial banks and, if so, whether there was any Government intervention to ensure that farmers were protected from the vagaries of the commercial banking world, and whether the time was right for a comprehensive agricultural development policy.

An Evaluation of the Comprehensive Agricultural Support Programme (CASP)

Monitoring and evaluation was found to be weak within the Department of Agriculture, Forestry and Fisheries as well as the Department of Rural Development, despite the dedicated capacity.
