The origins of Morillas

DG: Through the book A Special Relationship, which I made around 25 years ago. The work consists of a set of 5 drawings using various graphic means to create an actual-size representation of a previous work that consisted of 5 sets of identical real objects - clipboard, , , written title, eraser - each with one missing. And the smell... Twenty years ago it would be almost impossible to imagine the quantum shift that has taken place where the technology predominantly Mac of course has revolutionised our industry — slashing timescales, opening up design to a wider user base, making life significantly easier for designers to meet the requirements of the brief and their clients.

Koancuts (Letrafilm), 1969

The original work used real paper, clipboards, pencils, string, india rubbers and written titles. DG: It was dead easy! I wished to respect the integrity of the objects, to use objects available to everyone, and to use relationships implied by the objects themselves as the structural basis for the whole.

Unique Vintage x Pantone

My thought was that its benign purpose was to channel people's moods toward happiness and contentment. JLW: How did the travel books come about? The fourth shows the clipboard, the sheet of paper, the pencil, and the written title and goes on the centre of the sheet of paper.
