Southern Chinese Martial Art Styles During the Qing Dynasty

A completely different legend traces Dog Boxing to a Bai Lian Si Temple near the Southern Shaolin Temple. Relationship to Chu Gar: From the magazine articles out there on Chu Gar written by Gene Chen and Paul Whitrod, they say Lao Sui learned his Art from a Wong Fook Gao who was also born in Wai Yeung - Huang Nian Jiao and Wong Fook Gao are the same name with different pronunciations.

Lum Sang trained diligently for a number of years under master Chung Yel Jung until grandmaster Lee Sum See arrived at Chung Yel Jung's door. Also commonly found in the south, is the San Bu Toi, the 3 Step Push set. Yan Qiyang, who was a Tiger boxing master, decided to challenge her to test out this new White Crane Fist.

Mandarin Chinese Basic Conversation

He was caught and executed by the Qing authorities. The technical similarities of Wing Chun and Fujian White Crane suggest that the two are related.

Chinese Collections

He is one of the Sentinel class in his faction. This style later influenced the development of Wing Chun and Hung Gar.

Plants & Formulas

They eventually reached the Fujian temples and brought this internal martial arts influence there. An interesting point to mention here is: some sources state that Fong Wing Chun was Hung Hei Goon's second wife. There are many different branches of Wing Chun in Southern China.

Chinese Herbal Medicine

Of this generation of inheritors, Cheung Ng is one to date that has proven to have historically existed.
