LIFE OF WILLIAM CAREY (Chapter 5)

We knew that before he was rather inclined to persecute the faith he now seemed to wish to propagate. He had thus early brought into the service of Christ the Hindoo love of musical recitative, which was recently re-discovered--as it were--and now forms an important mode of evangelistic work when accompanied by native musical instruments.

Mission Frontiers

This made the mental illness of his wife worse and she never recovered from it.

The less told story of William Carey

I think I had a desire to follow Christ; but one idea occurred to my mind on hearing those words which broke me off from the Church of England. If he feels all the anxiety and tender solicitude of a father, all that delight in their welfare and company that a father does in the midst of his children, they will feel all that freedom with, and confidence in him which he can desire. He was troubled by what he saw of the communities along the rivers.

William Carey — The Traveling Team

He was generally one of the most active in all the amusements and recreations that boys in general pursue. He was trying to raise funds to go back to India and he wanted a companion to go with him. I have a strong persuasion that the doctrine of a dying Saviour would, under the Holy Spirits influence, melt their hearts.

Lessons from History part three: William Carey, 'I can plod and persevere. That is my only genius.'

Carey was going alone, or with one equally to be depended on along with him, he would not oppose him; but his strong disapprobation of Mr. Another, the poet's granddaughter, was the mother of Edmund Kean, and he at first was known by her name on the stage. He knew that God would do great things even through him.

William Carey: “The Father of Modern Missions”

Within months, Hannah and Joshua opened boarding schools for girls and boys, to teach a variety of subjects, including English. Ryland read his letter from Carey he sent for Dr.

William Carey

Cook had written about the heathen world, which had not yet been evangelised. All things considered we preferred the latter, till the arrival of our friends from Kidderpore to whom we had addressed letters.
