A Treatise Concerning Man's Perfection in Righteousness: Edited By: A.M. Overett Translated By: Peter Holmes By: St. Augustine: 9781643730394

Choose one of your men, and have him come down to me. Objection 2: Further, perfection consists more especially in the love of God than in the love of our neighbor.

Christian Perfection And Contemplation

Higher perfection, which suppresses deliberate venial sin and voluntary imperfections, is only of counsel. To be sure, this does not mean that all are obliged to that perfection, in a certain sense exterior, which consists, for example, in voluntary poverty and virginity. Thus the virtue of fortitude is essentially a rational, happy mean, between cowardice and temerity; a happy mean, moreover, which, by reason of its rationality, stands out as a culminating point above these irrational forms of human action.

Merritt, Timothy, 1775

Therefore it would seem that perfection consists in the observance of the precepts. On the contrary, It is stated XIX, qu. Although I should not have dared to say this of them for who would be so bold as to call them who have God for their Father? Some important admonitions concerning this matter, 407.

PERFECTION AND THE PRECEPT OF THE LOVE OF GOD

But if it is impious to say this, we are driven to confess that every is an act, not a thing. Reply to Objection 2: A man may be said to be perfect in two ways.

Merritt, Timothy, 1775

It is One Thing to Depart, and Another Thing to Have Departed, from All Sin. Hence nothing hinders the state of perfection from being without renunciation of one's possessions, and the same applies to other outward practices. Translated by Peter Holmes and Robert Ernest Wallis, and revised by Benjamin B.

Another look at John Wesley's doctrine of Christian perfection

Whether a religious can without leave of his superior receive money, in order to do works of charity with it; and what those cases are, wherein he would sin against his vow of poverty by doing so, 177 XVI. A second result of the precept of the love of God is that every Christian, each according to his condition, must strive for the perfection of charity, For each and every one it is a general obligation, and is not reserved to religious and clerics.

So precisely did he mirror his Master that he became his very image.

A Treatise Concerning Man's Perfection in Righteousness: Edited By: A.M. Overett Translated By: Peter Holmes By: St. Augustine: 9781643730394

H YMN Sing praise to God who reigns above, the God of all creation, the God of power, the God of love, the God of our salvation; with healing balm my soul he fills, and every faithless murmur stills: to God all praise and glory. The passages, therefore, which he adduces are not really contrary to the statement that no person is without in this life. When they saw that their hero was dead, the Philistines took to flight.
