U.S. Govt. Print. Off. - Large declines seen in teen substance abuse, delinquency

5. There is inadequate attention to developing systems of care that are centered around patient needs. <ul style="list-style-type: none">There is inadequate institutional, clinical, and peer support for people with OUD (15, 17, 37, 76, 125) including:<ul style="list-style-type: none">allied health professionals who can help patients manage aspects of their health care needs (71, 72) andpeer recovery specialists that increase patient retention in ongoing treatment (23, 74).Comprehensive care services should be implemented more broadly, as they are shown to support patients and increase clinician willingness to provide treatment (64, 67, 75).Patients report many challenges when seeking care, such as not knowing where to seek care (2), long travel distances to treatment facilities, and difficulty finding child care and transportation (76).There are significant racial disparities in ability to access MOUD (78, 79) and overdose mortality (80).There are significant geographic disparities in access to MOUD (25, 26, 34, 55, 90, 133, 142, 147, 148, 149).	54. States should implement and fund models that address patient needs at varying levels of complexity. <ul style="list-style-type: none">After ensuring that these initiatives address the needs of local communities, expand models such as hub-and-spoke and telemedicine that meet the needs of diverse patient populations at varying levels of complexity (22, 84, 145). 55. The Substance Abuse and Mental Health Services Administration, National Institute on Drug Abuse, and the Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services should implement and evaluate programs that expedite access to medications for opioid use disorder. <ul style="list-style-type: none">Explore and pilot other methods to lower the threshold to accessing treatment, including providing treatment in more convenient locations (e.g., mobile clinics and shelters) or eliminating requirements such as attending group therapy or observed initiation, because removing these barriers has demonstrated greater patient engagement (76, 89, 90, 91). 56. The Substance Abuse and Mental Health Services Administration, National Institute on Drug Abuse, and the Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services should fund and evaluate innovative models of treatment delivery that address social determinants of health and racial and geographic disparities in access to care.
