UNICEF: 20 percent of children in developed countries living in poverty

Many children, especially girls, are also vulnerable to violence on their long and hazardous journeys to and from school.

What one 20

Unfortunately, poverty status and stress are two markedly consistent factors among perpetrators of , and they are intrinsically intertwined. So, what can be done? Additionally, we can help achieve extreme poverty reduction by spreading awareness of the effects of poverty on children! Firstly, parents living below the poverty level often have difficulties meeting basic economic needs for their families, such as paying for rent, food, utilities, clothing, education, accommodations, health care, health insurance, transportation, and child care.

Poverty and its Effects on Children

Language barriers, gender roles, and reliance on child labor can all stall progress to provide quality education. Pregnancy and childbirth are the leading causes of death in girls between the ages of 15 and 19 worldwide. Every year, 14 million girls under the age of 18 are married.
