Re Z (Recognition of Foreign Order) [2016] EWHC 784 (Fam)

Proceedings for divorce a mensa et thoro have become practically redundant in recent years. This was the basis of the decision of Henchy J.

Fears Brexit could prevent foreign divorces being recognised in Ireland

The effect of this is that a divorce granted anywhere in the UK will be recognised in Ireland provided that one of the spouses is domiciled anywhere in the UK. In this State no such judicial process is available.

Irish divorce

I outlined the facts as I found them to be very relevant to the facts of the case at hand. Instead, cases tend to arise on a case by case basis in litigation, and the courts both in this jurisdiction and elsewhere have shown ingenuity and some subtlety in attempting to ensure a measure of flexibility and adaptability in the applicable law and in limiting unnecessary legal complexity and human distress.

EU is not undermining divorce law

This was the view of the majority of the Supreme Court but Judge O'Donnell had a dissenting judgement which I have included below the majority judgment.

On making the decree the Court may award alimony to the petitioning spouse.

Here's Everything You Need To Know About The Divorce Referendum

The effect of the decision in J. Having concluded that this case does fall within Brussels IIA, I do not consider it necessary or appropriate to say anything further about the use of mirror orders as a freestanding remedy for the recognition and enforcement of foreign orders falling outside the regulation. A marriage considered dissolved in one jurisdiction may be considered subsisting in another.
