Pelham, by Edward Bulwer Lytton

Of course, I owe an incalculable debt to Lawrence Richardson's learned and sensitive commentary on Propertius' poems; as my many citations of his Propertius: Elegies I—IV indicate, without his work on Propertius, my own would be very different, and much impoverished.

Ad valorem tax ad vitam aeternam - For all time ad vitam paramus - We are preparing for life ad vitam - For life addendum - A thing to be added adeste Fideles - Be present, faithful ones adsum - Here! At the end of that time being of royal descent I became entitled to an honorary degree.
Neither is it alone force, but as it would seem intelligent force that rules this universe.

Under such a regime, the little punishment little children required was easily administered, and the spirit of law and order brought these blind and ignorant worship- pers to their knees, and held them there in breathless awe. Madame Laurent received us with the most evident satisfaction, and introduced us forthwith to our countrywoman. The lock itself speaks, lamenting its separation from Berenike and the envy generated by its berth among the stars.
