Guidelines to Conducting Effective Meetings

Golden Rule 6: Wrap up meetings with a clear statement of the next steps and who is to take them.

Guidelines for Small Group Discussion

Improved therapy process interpersonal openness, more self-disclosure, increased cohesion, improved working alliance, and more exploratory behavior are generally supported by the research evidence.

Support groups: Make connections, get help

Group as a social system. When might you lead a group discussion? Because focus groups are structured and directed, but also expressive, they can yield a lot of information in a relatively short time. The selection process for heterogeneous, long-term outpatient psychotherapy groups demands careful consideration and thorough assessment.

Guidelines to Conducting Effective Meetings

It is widely recognized that a prerequisite for effective treatment consists of three interdependent components of the therapeutic working alliance: client and therapist agreement on goals, client and therapist agreement on tasks, and the quality of the bond between client and therapist Luborsky, 1976; Bordin, 1979; Horvath, 2000.
