On the Water

These ships, their cargoes, and the mooring systems which restrained them are the physical remains of the maritime history of California. Since Drake was the first navigator to coast SW Tierra del Fuego and to discover Cape Horn, none of the islands were named. In 1602, 60 years after Cabrillo, the Spaniard, who had been on the Santa Ana when it was captured by Thomas Cavendish off on the Baja peninsula in 1587, explored California's coastline from San Diego as far north as.
