Vivekachudamani

The Buddhist scholar states, Although it is common to find Western scholars and Hindus arguing that Sankaracarya was the most influential and important figure in the history of Hindu intellectual thought, this does not seem to be justified by the historical evidence. The affirmations of the Śruti, it is argued, need to be verified and confirmed by the knowledge gained through direct experience anubhava and the authority of the Śruti, therefore, is only secondary.

Vivekachudamani

Starting from childhood, when learning has to start, the philosophy has to be a way of life. The exact dates of birth of Adi Shankaracharya believed by four monasteries are Dwaraka at 491 B. The sense of hearing is merged into the mind, whose nature consists of thinking about things, and the mind is in turn merged into the intellect, which Sankara then says is made into 'mere cognition' vijñānamātra ; that is, all particular cognitions resolve into their universal, which is cognition as such, thought without any particular object.
