Hip po , hip po , hooray! As a , the giraffe first chews its food, then swallows it for processing and then visibly passes the half-digested cud up the neck and back into the mouth to chew again. The footage, which was filmed by Owen Maynard during a family trip in Georgia, shows the inquisitive wild animals poke their heads into the family car during a drive-through safari and startle the children inside. Zebras like to associate with other animals such as baboons , impala and kudu, however, the most common association is between the zebra and the.

10 giraffe facts!

On their rumps and legs, okapis have striping like that of a zebra. The mountain zebra has smaller stripes than the plains zebra; its stripes are closely spaced on its head and shoulders but widely spaced on its haunches. Family groups will congregate with other family groups and bachelor herds to form larger herds, especially during migration.
