Barbados Voter Education

With many countries in the grip of International Monetary Fund IMF and World Bank structural adjustment programs, the ideological position of neoliberalism became not just more strident, but dominant in academia as well as in the public discourse. In 1986 the Democratic Labour Party regained the government under the leadership of Mr. This is not to deny that women themselves have shied away from politics for a variety of reasons, including the fact that in its public culture and representation, politics carries an unhealthy masculinist identity, largely anathema to the values of cooperation and justice which themselves are ascribed more to women than to men.

Interrogating Gender, Kinship and Sexuality

Nanny was not the only woman who dared to confront the militarism and injustice of colonialism. In 1938 Grantley Adams a leader of one of the Trade Unions at that time, founded the Barbados Progressive League which later to become the Barbados Labour Party BLP.
