The concept of CHDPs Despite the investment in CHPs by EHCN cities, a series of business meetings towards the end of Phase II concluded that many were too limited in scope and strategic direction, often characterized by a focus on health education and disease prevention by the health sector Tsouros, 1998. In contrast, such was the enthusiasm of the urban planning department in Milan for a strategic health dimension to their plans and regeneration programmes, that in Phases III and IV their city planners led development of the HUP concept across the EHCN.

Moreover, that particular road project will be a boost for the tourism and hospitality hotels industry, a major source of foreign exchange earnings in ECOWAS countries such as The Gambia, Ghana, and Senegal. How will they even afford to buy cars to drive on the beautiful roads you are building? Bord Pleanala has declined to comment on the landslide at the site, saying it falls to the council to investigate.
