The Collected Works of John Stuart Mill, Volume XVI

To the business man they are both equally forms of property, merely different kinds of investments—that is, arrangements for obtaining a revenue from the labor of others. The right wing represents all that is most negative in the traditions of British Labour — all which is servile, cowardly and ignorant.

[Classics] The Condition of the Working Class in England

If, for example, the pain which we feel upon doing what tends to the destruction of our bodies, —suppose upon too near approaches to fire; or upon wounding ourselves,—be appointed by the Author of Nature to prevent our doing what thus tends to our destruction ; this is altogether as much an instance of his punishing our actions, and consequently of our being under his government, as declaring, by a voice from heaven, that if we acted so he would inflict such pain upon us, and inflicting it whether it be greater or less. The proletarians have nothing to lose but their chains.
