Stay on Trails: 2011

The USFWS opined that the proposed salvage actions would generate additional sediment in the already-impacted watershed, negating or delaying the benefits from the restoration actions. LEGISLATIVE HISTORY: HOUSE REPORTS: No. Roosevelt, transferred the following lands to the Salmon National Forest from the Idaho now the Payette National Forest: lands lying east or north and east of a line beginning at the forest boundary on Salmon River at mouth of Cottonwood Creek and extending up Cottonwood Creek to the mouth of Basin Creek; thence up the ridge between Basin Creek and Peak Creek to Cottonwood Lookout; thence following the divide between Papoose Creek and Cottonwood Creek drainage to Farrow Mountain; thence south and east along the divide on the west side of Papoose Creek drainage to the forest boundary on the Middle Fork of Salmon River.

Nonetheless, the drainage remains highly vulnerable to erosion, and the fisheries resource within it remains at substantial risk.

South Fork Wilderness Ranch

Harper, Acting Associate Deputy Chief, National Forest System

Idaho Conservation League v. Thomas

The subject DEIS illustrates the problem with a lack of clarity of mission. After the first year the range would be examined and adjustments in grazing permits made according to the condition of the range.

Section 7 Consultation Issued Biological Opinions

The plaintiffs in that action strongly contested their being denied access over the road to their inholdings in and around the town of Yellow Pine, Idaho. Comments submitted anonymously will be accepted and considered; however, without an associated name and address, receiving further correspondences concerning the proposed action will not be possible and those individuals will not have standing for objection.
