Simple cell receptive fields could be 'built' in the cortex by collecting responses from LGN cells whose receptive fields fall along a line across the retina, but the exact wiring is still the subject of debate. Slides were allowed to dry at room temperature, and were then dehydrated in 100 % EtOH, cleared in xylene, and cover slipped with Permount. Scale bar 200 μ m Synaptic zinc staining in area 18 is qualitatively similar to area 17 with subtle laminar differences.

Roles of N

Postnatal development of zinc-containing cells and neuropil in the visual cortex of the mouse.

Ocular Dominance Plasticity of Areas 17 and 21a in the Cat

Primary Visual Cortex Within the Cortico

Orientation preference patterns in mammalian visual cortex: a wire length minimization approach. A,C Each row shows orientation differential maps evoked by monocular stimuli. M: widest zone of purely magnocellular LGN inputs.

Roles of N

Areas 19, 21 and Ssy long dashed and dotted, short dashed, and solid lines, respectively show a subtle decrease to 0. An interesting question is then why the dimension of a 2DG column corresponds to approximately half a cycle variation in orientation selectivity. Thalamic Axon Fields: Do They Create a Scale for Functional and Anatomical Match in Column Size? They receive input from layer 4B of V1 and they project to V3 and MT.
