The court maintained that although the royal throne started from Amobi family and remained there for many years until the demise of Igwe Walter Amobi about 19 years ago, it did not mean that the throne should be an exclusive property of the Amobi family, as canvassed by the appellants. It was not however, known whether the Amobi family would proceed to the Supreme Court as the lead Counsel to the family, Emeka Offordile, SAN, did not indicate so. Ethiopia: Accountability Past and Present: Human Rights in Transition. Dismissing the appeal filed by the Amobi family challenging the Ogidi High court judgement for lack of merit, the Appeal Court said it relied on the constitution of Ogidi Union which stated that any Ogidi man from the four quarters was eligible to contest the Igweship position as the throne was not hereditary.
