The bow-window of the stately hall, on the left side of this court, is a beautiful object; it forms half an hexagon, several yards high, with stone montens and transoms, in proportion, and the cupola crowned with ivy. In 1613 or thereabouts, Lady Mary Wroth, niece of Sir Philip Sidney and friend of Ben Jonson, wrote a sonnet sequence in the person of Pamphilia to Amphilanthus, her lover, William Herbert, third Earl of Pembroke, the father of her two illegitimate children, and joint dedicatee of the Shakespeare First Folio. Hull Literary Club, October 1st, 1883.
