Likewise, I felt that our narrator, Abigail Howland the 2nd , was not very adept at communicating the relevant bits of her story. And how the water bubbled with rising gases when you stirred it with a stick, how the crawfish hung on the underside of a log, and you picked them off like fruit.

The Keepers of the House

Grau has created her own corner of the South here, presenting men and women of varying strengths and weaknesses, all caught up in the ongoing history of that area including the complications, terrors and pain of race relations.
