The first row shows the input point clouds.

Point

Covers foreign merchant transaction fees at Mastercard locations outside the United States. Purchasing goods and services with Point Card, in most cases, will earn points, excluding balance transfers, cash-like transactions, digital currency purchases, certain gift card purchases and all other forms of manufactured spending. There's no use in arguing the point.

Point

In this paper, we design a novel type of neural network that directly consumes point clouds, which well respects the permutation invariance of points in the input. The classification network takes n points as input, applies input and feature transformations, and then aggregates point features by max pooling. Thus we can add a data-dependent spatial transformer network that attempts to canonicalize the data before the PointNet processes them, so as to further improve the results.
