You Can Do it! Education programs for Secondary School

STEM in schools

I have worked through the majority of the on-line course, Social-Emotional Learning for All. The recommendations in two reports Education Committee 1994; Education Committee 1995 were accepted and implemented, with per-capita core funding supplemented by needs-based allocations for students at educational risk, students with disabilities and impairments, rurality and isolation, students with non-English-speaking backgrounds, and priority programs. The value of liberty meant little, for children had to attend the school nearest their home.
