Teaching Religious Tolerance

Another 15% of the adult population claims no religious affiliation. The appeal for Christlike behavior frequently comes from people who have no meaningful understanding of how Christ behaved and who would be greatly surprised to find out. In fact different countries, and sometimes parts of the same country, differ due to their geographical position, language, history, religion and economic situation.

The First Vision and Religious Tolerance

People like to equate tolerance with Christlike behavior, which is in many ways a poor fit. True, there are those who think it quite unchristian of Latter-day Saints to suggest that others cannot be saved in their errant doctrines.

Christians and Interreligious Dialogue
