The saga of Thorgils and Haflidi (1945 edition)

Gudmund says that people would think he had behaved as a great man allmíkilmannliga if he confined himself to protecting his property: «En ef þu ferr með þann ofsa, sem í einskis manns dómi er, þá uffi ek, at þú móttír ofsanum ok ofirkappinu, áðr lýkr málum ykkum Haflíða» but if you proceed with a savagery ofsi that has no parallel, I am afraid you will meet savagery ofsinn and arrogance before the conflict between you and Haflidi is over. The traditional view is that the short version is most original Finnur Jónsson 1923: 453; Björn K.

2 Code of honour under debate in two Icelandic sagas

Hann var opt með Haflíða frænda sínum á vetrinn, ok var hónum óskapuðr. Þórðr mælti: «Eigi kann ek þér, Þorgils, ráð at kenna; en á því er mér bæna-staðr, at þú þiggir at mér heimboð. There are clear parallels between this conflict and the previous honour killing in Norway.
