B.S. in Psychology: Criminal Psychology

Two-thirds of victims attacked by an intimate including a current or former spouse, boyfriend, or girlfriend reported that alcohol had been involved, and only 31% of victimizations by strangers are alcohol-related. In cases of arson, the property becomes a crime scene and a criminal investigation is launched. A quick review of current program admission statistics reveals that applicants should have a GRE of at least 1000 and a GPA of 3.

What Criminal Psychologists Do

It has been extremely beneficial to work on this in teams, and use practical skills.

What Criminal Psychologists Do

Another related degree is a Bachelor of Arts in Psychology with a concentration in Addiction Studies.

Forensic Psychologist: Career Guide

Many also complete a post-doctoral fellowship in forensic psychology.
