Of 16 million hectares sown in 1966-67, wheat accounted for 53%, oats 11%, green fodder 14%, hay 9%, barley 6%, and sugar cane 1. Its connection to Sydney as a people and goods mover is important, but its founders maintained a Victorian presence, not a Sydney one.

Guardian Australia is eight years old, with 200 years of history

Recent evidence indicates that humans processed gathered and consumed wild cereal grains as far back as 23,000 years ago. The industry used slave labour known as 'Kanakas', people uprooted from the Pacific islands and brought to Australia to work as cheap labour on the sugar farms. A number of Australian inventions and technological advances helped expansion around the turn of the century.

Papers of Norman and Evelyn Bartlett

Mr Corletto said locals and visitors from outside the area were captivated by the incredible history of the site and how Coolangatta in Queensland got its name from the wreckage of a ship built at the Shoalhaven Heads estate by Alexander and David Berry. Especially constructed for London's sea voyage, this hardy timber yacht was home to London and his wife during their cruising passage throughout the Pacific Islands. At the time Guardian Australia was a handful of staff, guided by the enthusiasm of Katharine Viner, our first Australian editor, and our absolute determination to make a difference.

Americans

The trade in Australian butter was severely affected when Britain entered the EEC in 1973. In the postwar years, the Minister for Immigration, put out a call for 'one million Americans to immigrate'. Based mainly in Melbourne, Jefferson toured Victorian country towns but made a return visit to Sydney before sailing for London from Melbourne in 1865.

Manning Clark's History of Australia, Used

Over the last 10 years, wool producers have had to face significant changes in the industry, including a decline in the underlying demand for wool, changes to wool marketing arrangements, disruption of traditional international markets, and strong competition from competing fibres, which have had a devastating effect on the profitability of all sectors of the wool industry. In the early 1950s almost 11% of persons employed in agriculture were under 20; 21% of males and 15% of females employed in agriculture were aged 20 to 29.
