Urbanization and the Development of Cities

Urban sprawl is also associated with negative environmental and public health effects, many of which are related to automobile dependence: increases in personal transportation costs, air pollution and reliance on fossil fuel, increases in traffic accidents, delays in emergency medical services response times, and decreases in land and water quantity and quality. Concentric Zone Model: The Concentric Ring Model described the city as a series of concentric rings, each home to a different group and social function. Since in the edges of most cities, the abundant open space is fenced into back yards, the children don't have much of an opportunity to interact with nature's streams.

Counterurbanisation

Commuting: the process by which people living in one place, travel to another place to work.

Rural urban fringe: Concept, History, Reasons, Issues

Urban Structure Models Grid In grid models, land is divided by streets intersect at right angles, forming a grid. Urban Redevelopment: the total clearance of parts of old inner city areas and starting afresh with new houses, especially high-rise flats.

The History and Evolution of Suburbs

Today, New York is part of a conurbation, surrounded by other urbanised areas including New Jersey and the rest of Long Island. However, our research is meant to aid your own, and we are not acting as licensed professionals.

Redevelopments on rural/urban fringe

It draws on human ecology theories, which compared the city to an ecosystem, with processes of adaptation and assimilation. It is a zone of mixed land uses, from shopping malls and golf courses to farmland and motorways. Irregular Pattern The irregular pattern model was developed to explain urban structure in the Third World.

Effects of Urbanization On Poverty

Housing developments From the 1960's onwards, , eg East Kilbride, and like Castlemilk, were built on greenfield sites on the outskirts of the city to combat overcrowding in the inner city. Urbanisation: the process by which an increasing percentage of a country's population comes to live in towns and cities. Related: Retail developments: It is aimed to attract shoppers away from the dirty and congested CBD by providing shops in a pleasant and clean environment, protected from the weather and with free parking
