Soviet State and Society Under Nikita Khrushchev (BASEES Routledge Series on Russian and East European Studies)

Ominously, this was linked with food shortages amounting to famine in the district of Minsk. This movement by part of the most outspokenly dissident elite toward a pragmatic competitive position accords fully with the convergence thesis. The third conference, from 4 to 10 July 1920, reverted to the question of the status of the Evsektsia itself in the party, and again three groups emerged.
