Valuing the Non

It is wrong when it tends otherwise. Simplistic appeals to biocentrism and intrinsic value in environmental ethics If ecological theory cannot provide a complete, uncontroversial basis for environmental ethics, what other resources can philosophers and ethicists provide? Nash contests Derr's account of biocentric thought and also his construal of a Christian ecological ethics.

Secondly, animals serve as food sources of humans, for which they are killed.

Valuing the Non

Suppose putting out natural fires, culling feral animals or destroying some individual members of overpopulated indigenous species is necessary for the protection of the integrity of a certain ecosystem. Only items that have interests, Feinberg argued, can be regarded as having legal standing and, likewise, moral standing.

Environmental Ethics and Christian Humanism: by Thomas Sieger Derr

It is a fact that the increasing pollution levels are hazardous for not only humans but also for plants and animals. In this book, climate scientist Johnny Wei-Bing Lin argues that determining the content of environmental stewardship, far from being a straightforward exercise, is a difficult and complex endeavor. Professors at colleges and universities and teachers at secondary schools can also be Christian caretakers of nature through teaching, research and public service activities that focus on providing needed information and equipping others to meet natural resource and environmental problems and challenges now and in the future in a Christian manner.

Environmental Ethics Views on Deforestation

The food chain system shown in Figure 2 illustrate how living and nonliving elements of nature in an ecosystem fit and function together to provide life-support for each other. Such a life, the bioregionalists argue, will enable people to enjoy the fruits of self-liberation and self-development see the essays in List 1993, and the book-length treatment in Thayer 2003, for an introduction to bioregional thought.
