Sustainable and Ethical Making in the UK Jewellery and Silversmithing Industry

If its any consolation...I flew into Sydney and then to Uluru...only to see the great red rock in the pouring rain! The journey to become a professional silversmith has been inspirational. In architectural terms it is my challenge to create these experiences, which in turn create lasting, tangible memories. With talent and dedication, it is definitely achievable! There is a distinct lack of housing within the immediate area surrounding the site and I believe the inclusion of housing for makers within proximity of the site is crucial in creating a sense of urbanity and 24hour life in what currently could be considered a largely desolate area.

How to Become an Interior Designer

Over the course of the eighteenth and nineteenth centuries, some of these trades adapted to industrialization, as the trade of metalworking, for example, has evolved into the trade of machining. Remember that you are taking them on a journey; some clients are so disconnected from the creative worlds that whatever you introduce them to, whether textile screen printing or leather wrapping, will be eye-poppingly interesting for them - and sometimes equally terrifying! Frameworks should be put in place to aid the preservation of reuse on a local scale.

Royal Warrant Holders Association

People increasingly want to be reassured about what they are buying. When the programmes of these civic institutions relocate, host communities inherit the site, where permanent structure is re-purposed for housing and community facilities.
