The impact of HIV/AIDS on children's educational outcome: a critical review of global literature

In parts of the world where pregnant women do not have access to these drugs, the rate of infection among infants is much higher. Healthlink Worldwide and the Hand-in-Hand Network do not distribute the resources listed in this pack except our own publications.

Education can help prevent HIV and AIDS

Contains nearly 200 participatory activities for groups with discussion exercises and role play.

HIV and AIDS (for Kids)

In the United States, new infections at birth are now very rare because of drugs that pregnant women can take that can block HIV transmission to the child. They must be taken exactly as prescribed or they won't work.

Working with Young People on Sexual Health and HIV/AIDS

It is narrated by a street boy and includes interviews with young people living on the street.
