Potentials

The 1951 United Nations Convention Relating to the Status of Refugees has created a system for providing protection to people at risk of persecution in their own countries. Thus, in an attempt to escape impending persecution, some PWAs have sought safety in other countries. The last is perhaps the most significant: it refers to the right of refugees not to be returned to a country where they risk persecution.

Diplomatic Asylum for Julian Assange?

The picture that emerges is however that the consensus lies predominantly on choosing institutional reform, and that chances to 'communitize' Third Pillar issues seem more remote. According to the United States Committee for Refugees USCR , by the end of 1999 there were 14 million refugees 'people displaced by persecution and conflict across an international border' , and 21 million 'internally displaced' people.

China and the International Refugee Protection Regime: Past, Present, and Potentials

Although no formal agreement had been reached, the reality is that several main trends came to the fore. South Korea donated USD900 000. In 1992, China repatriated 172 aliens who allegedly entered China illegally or were overstaying in China, including more than 30 UNHCR refugees.

Comparing the Inter

It has been argued that UNHCR has moved away from its primary task of protection to focus more on assistance.

CONVENTION ON TERRITORIAL ASYLUM

Article XII This Convention remains open to the signature of the Member States of the Organization of American States, and shall be ratified by the signatory States in accordance with their respective constitutional procedures.

2005 Warsaw Convention

While many poor and developing countries have become signatories, the flow of asylum seekers has remained to wealthy Western countries, and in its operation the Refugee Convention has developed, in the words of the Immigration Minister, as 'essentially a standard that is being imposed on developed countries'.
