The Immediate Tasks of the Soviet Government

And yet it would be extremely stupid and absurdly utopian to assume that the transition from capitalism to socialism is possible without coercion and without dictatorship. This task has not been completely fulfilled either, and it cannot be ignored because the monarchists and Constitutional-Democrats on the one hand, and their henchmen and hangers-on, the Mensheviks and Right Socialist-Revolutionaries, on the other, are continuing their efforts to unite for the purpose of overthrowing Soviet power.

And yet it would be extremely stupid and absurdly utopian to assume that the transition from capitalism to socialism is possible without coercion and without dictatorship. And if we add to this the provocative policy of the lackeys of the bourgeoisie the Mensheviks, the Right Socialist-Revolutionaries, etc it will become perfectly clear what prolonged and persistent efforts must be exerted by the best and the most class-conscious workers and peasants in order to bring about a complete change in the mood of the people and to bring them on to the proper path of steady and disciplined labour.

But is not the admission that we must make up for lost time tantamount to admission of some kind of an error? Of course, the peace achieved by the Russian Soviet Republic is unstable not because she is now thinking of resuming military operations; apart from bourgeois counter-revolutionaries and their henchmen the Mensheviks and others , no sane politician thinks of doing that. We have not yet learned to do this, but we shall learn.

Particular significance now attaches to measures for raising labour discipline and the productivity of labour. It goes without saying that this question has another side to it. Secondly, what relation has this case—this precedent, if you will—to the special tasks of government in the present concrete situation? In Russia these societies are not so well developed as in the advanced countries, nevertheless, they have over ten million members.

In the war against capital, however, the advance cannot be stopped, and there can be no thought of our abandoning the further expropriation of capital.

Six Theses on the Immediate Tasks

In this respect the situation is particularly bad and even hopeless if we are to believe those who have allowed themselves to be intimidated by the bourgeoisie or by those who are serving the bourgeoisie for their own ends. The General Slogan Of The Moment The objective situation reviewed above, which has been created by the extremely onerous and unstable peace, the terrible state of ruin, the unemployment and famine we inherited from the war and the rule of the bourgeoisie represented by Kerensky and the Mensheviks and Right Socialist-Revolutionaries who supported him , all this has inevitably caused extreme weariness and even exhaustion of wide sections of the working people.

The immediate tasks of the Soviet government (1966 edition)

There is hardly a single victorious military campaign in history in which the victor did not commit certain mistakes, suffer partial reverses, temporarily yield something and in some places retreat.
