This method is known to increase soil moisture while decreasing soil erosion from wind, effectively combating the climate conditions. And yet, puzzlingly, these same people had managed to carve enormous statues — almost a thousand of them, with giant, hollow-eyed, gaunt faces, some weighing 75 tons. In the hole, the man could feel the lobster tugging at him from above.

The Rapa Nui language, also known as Pascuan, is classified as an Eastern Polynesian language and is currently written in Latin script. The Dutch reported that a fight broke out in which they killed ten or twelve islanders.

Rapa Nui people

Some scientists say that Easter Island was not inhabited until 700-800 CE. Now, a genetic analysis sheds light on the possible heritage of the Botoctudo. The native people of Rapa Nui continue to push for such a statute, which would allow them to exercise their right to self-determination and combat the cultural and ecological destruction that has occurred due to overpopulation and tourism.
