The software to produce these numbers was 89 lines of C to which a few general purpose library functions and definitions need to be added. The issue has been identified as a possibility by an official source in one of the few countries using preferential voting for national elections, making it encyclopedic. When we come to the table, I have more to say in my own defence.

Talk:Ranked voting

But none of my classmates seems too sure what it is about or how it will work. This should be the other way round. In addition a buyers make decisions on their own behalves, whereas voters make decisions for collectives, b voters are usually fully aware of their participation in social decision-making, whereas buyers are often unaware of the secondary repercussions of their acts, c responsibility for making purchasing decisions is concentrated on the individual buyer, whereas responsibility for making collective decisions is divided, d different buying decisions at the same time are made under conditions of scarcity --- the selection of one thing precludes the selection of another, whereas different voting decisions are not --- one can vote for a president and a judge in the same election without one vote precluding the other, and e under ordinary conditions, a buyer is choosing to buy an actual good and is therefore never overruled in his choice, whereas it is the nature of voting that the voter is choosing among potential alternatives and may be overruled by other voters.
