Students are especially encouraged to spend an extended period in a study abroad program at Zhejiang University in China or Kansai Gaidai in Japan, where they gain invaluable hands-on experience and language training while fulfilling credits towards their CJS major at Valparaiso University.

Related Literature and Related Studies

Although the primary emphasis is on these East Asian subjects, the department welcomes applicants who are seeking to integrate their interests in Chinese or Japanese literature with interdisciplinary studies in such fields as history, history of art, linguistics, religious studies, comparative literature, film studies, literary theory and criticism, and the social sciences. These could include Chinese history, politics, contemporary society, literature and visual culture. Students not already possessing a degree in philosophy may be required to take additional units if deemed necessary.
