@LeadingLearner

Be aware that our mind gravitates toward the negatives. Today we are talking about Magic, his School of Astonishment, the impact of the Pandemic on his magic business, and he shares with us some ways to make Video Engaging.

Teaching Learning Leading K

Cordeiro was exactly the kind of student school officials and researchers around the nation worried would vanish from the rosters when COVID-19 forced schools to close classrooms and move instruction online.

Leading and Learning

A class could meet online one day, share their challenges and then agree to meet a few days later to explore their findings. Research demonstrates that setting goals has a powerful effect on student confidence and achievement.

WGU Again Named a Top Ten Military Friendly® School

With the COVID-19 pandemic upending the conventional school environment, teachers and leaders have an opportunity to explore culturally responsive ways to support students and their families with the transition from the in-person classroom to the online learning experience by providing spaces for families and students to exercise their voice. Advanced learners who come to school overflowing with ideas and energy need to develop the skill to break long-term goals down into smaller, short-term goals that are within their reach.

US school districts: Where the top ones stand with online and classroom learning

If your school has a learning platform or learning management tool you could use this.

Learning Today, Leading Tomorrow

Student Program provides grants to college graduates, graduate students, and early-career professionals for individually designed study or research programs, and English teaching assistantships abroad.
