Agriculture and food security in India

Both countries have removed government controls, increased foreign trade, and built strong export-based economies. To drive such policies successfully, the capacity of state institutions and their responsiveness are critical. Movement of goods and people is extensive, if basic, achieved with bicycles, mopeds, carts, trucks, buses, and trains.

About SAARC

It has to happen from within. FDI inflows in Bangladesh were directed mainly to manufacturing, trade, and commerce related activities. Today, our focus is on driving systems-level change by partnering with government institutions and non-governmental partners to support the strengthening and implementation of the Agriculture Sector Development Plan II.

Agriculture for Peace: A call to action to avert a global food crisis

Equality of opportunity and social equity — together with social protections against market and employment transitions — are an essential element for and reducing poverty. But structural impediments prevailing in developing countries often constrain inclusive growth. Placing value in whole-of-society approach, ASSIST has forged partnerships with public and private sector players in rolling-out various interventions.

Ending Poverty in South Asia: Ideas that Work

And smallholder farmers play a key role, as they hold as much as in staple food crops, with the rest being held in gene banks. For the first time in decades, Nepal also has a stable, majority government to carry out a long-term development vision. Much of the region lacks the basic infrastructure to ensuring integration with the global economy through efficient market linkages.

CIRDAP

This portfolio complements the broad Agricultural Development strategy by ensuring that, in addition to strong and well-resourced national plans and a functional private sector, countries also can rely on both adequate and appropriately-targeted resources from donors and a well-aligned, outcome-oriented system of global institutions to support their national efforts.

Agriculture and food security in India

With the largest proportion of agriculture production being rain-fed in South Asia, climate change exacerbates this egregious condition as smallholder farmers who constitute the largest percentage of farmers rely heavily on seasonal rainfall patterns to cultivate crops and feed livestock. In Britain at the time of industrial revolution rich landlords voluntarily invested some of their savings in growing industries.

Women's empowerment and gender equity in agriculture: A different perspective from Southeast Asia

The associated political climate will be based on democratic principles with emphasis on human rights, freedom of expression, the rule of law, equality of citizens irrespective of race, religion, and creed, and equality of opportunities.

What is the story of agriculture and the Sustainable Development Goals

Going forward, we will continue to integrate our own programs to improve coordination and efficient delivery of agricultural services- specifically where this integration can leverage national and other donor resources and around state and federal government platforms for reaching impact at scale.
