NYPD: How The Police Handles Missing Person Cases

The Chief of the Washington State Patrol is the State AMBER Alert Manager and has final decision making authority over all aspects of the Statewide Plan.

How Long Does a Person Need to Be Missing Before Police Are Obligated to Look for Them?

In 2003, a 21-year old black woman Romona Moore disappeared in Brooklyn, New York. The formal plan allows for a law enforcement agency to get information out about a person who is believed to be in danger and not able to return to safety on their own.

Missing Persons, Major Crime Unit, Investigative Services

On special category cases, police will devote as many resources as possible to the search. After receiving a report of a child abduction, the investigating agency determines if the incident meets the requirements of The State of New Hampshire AMBER ALERT Plan. Could a serial killer be operating in Ireland? The geographic and sociopolitical context of where and how a person goes missing often determines the time taken to start the search as well as the logistical and financial infrastructure in place to facilitate both the search and the identification process.

Missing Persons

The Washington State AMBER Alert Plan was authorized by RCW in 2003 with the Washington State Patrol designated as the lead agency. She didn't get her chance to live her life.

Race and Gender: Media Bias in Coverage of Missing Persons

When a missing person is found dead, it is the job of the medical examiner and the police to determine the cause and manner of death. Annie was an American from Long Island, New York, an only child with a lifelong interest in her Irish heritage. Authorities initially believed Jamie had run away from home, and as a result, she was not officially declared a missing person until January 1972.
