to Work: Testing Reemployment Services for Displaced by Howard S. Bloom

When individuals become dislocated workers as a result of job loss, mass layoffs, global trade dynamics, or transitions in economic sectors, the Dislocated Worker program provides services to assist them in re-entering the workforce. Forty-six references and an index are appended. However, individualized career and training services may be provided when a determination is made that the individual is in need of more than just basic career services.

WIOA Dislocated Worker Program

This monograph presents results from a study of the Texas Worker Adjustment Demonstration, a 2,192-person randomized experimental evaluation of reemployment programs for displaced workers conducted at three Texas sites during 1984-85. Rapid Response teams will work with employers and any employee representative s to quickly maximize public and private resources to minimize disruptions associated with job loss.

Dislocated Worker Program

The Rapid Response program is a pro-active, business-focused, and flexible strategy designed to respond to layoffs and plant closings by quickly coordinating services and providing immediate aid to companies and their affected workers. Rapid Response is a required activity designed to assist workers who are facing loss of employment to obtain reemployment as soon as possible. The following key findings are reported: 1 a relatively inexpensive mix of job-search assistance and limited occupational skills training can be a cost-effective means of assisting some displaced workers; 2 program impacts for displaced female workers were substantial and sustained throughout the 1-year follow-up period, although they diminished continually over time; 3 impacts for men were appreciable, but much smaller and shorter lived than those for women; and 4 measured earnings impacts for women exceeded their program costs.

WIOA Dislocated Worker Program

Trade Adjustment Assistance Program The TAA Program seeks to provide adversely affected workers with opportunities to obtain the skills, credentials, resources, and support necessary to re build skills for future jobs. Workers who need training are retrained with skills that are in demand by Montana's employers.
