

Learning from television - what the research says

National Society of Professionals in Telecommunications - Learning through radio and television in the time of COVID

Description: -

Television in educationLearning from television - what the research says

-Learning from television - what the research says

Notes: Bibliography : p. x-xii; p. 103-115

This edition was published in 1968

Filesize: 7.53 MB

Tags: #Young #children #learn #by #copying #you!

Television Effects on Education, Revisited

Psychology of Popular Media Culture, Vol. Family times are prime opportunities for social learning.

Television Effects on Education, Revisited

Our final decision was that this chapter would make a comprehensive effort to integrate research from both sections to and. The investigators plan to follow 3,000 to 5,000 youths over 10 years, examining the impact of digital technology on their physical, mental, and social well-being. Interestingly, being aggressive as a child did not predict watching more violent TV as a teenager, suggesting that TV watching could be a cause rather than a consequence of aggressive behavior.

EdCast » Learning to Read: What the Research Says » CUNY TV » City University Television

Observe the world around you. Dev Rev 2010;30 2 :128—54.

Research Says Screen Time Can Be Good For Your Kids

Horn University of Pittsburgh This chapter' summarizes a body of literature about instructional technology that is unique not only in its depth but also in its breadth and importance.

Related Books

- City at war - Milwaukee labor during World War II
- Children of the river
- Wirtschaftsverfassung der Bundesrepublik Deutschland - Entwicklung und ordnungspolitische Grundlagen
- Treatment procedures in communicative disorders
- Helft mir, meine Eltern trinken