Advance preparation might ease process-based as well as content-based dual-tasking problems cf. Processing of the Task 2 stimulus or activation of the Task 2 response Hommel, 1998 might occur in parallel to response selection in Task 1. Choice of hemodialysis access in older adults: a cost-effectiveness analysis.

Probing Interval Timing with Scalp

More specifically, the onset of the four-choice task stimulus was a temporally predictable action effect of the response to the two-choice task in sequenced SOA blocks.

showed that sequence learning was spared when there was a predictive relationship between the stimuli in the SRTT and the other task, future work should test whether this would lead to the acquisition of an integrated timing sequence.

US6615180B1

The order of these three testing blocks random SOA sequence stimuli, random SOA random stimuli, and sequence SOA random stimuli; see Table 1 was counterbalanced across participants. Yet, in many everyday contexts the timing and order of stimuli in different tasks are not random. We therefore performed an important preparatory stage analysis by conducting a feasibility study to ensure methodological approaches applied in a future multisite clinical trial are streamlined.

Cognition

Performance in the practice blocks Blocks 1 to 3; all with fixed stimulus sequence and fixed SOA sequence is reported in the Appendix see Table A1. However, vascular access outcomes i. The primary objective of this pilot trial was to examine the feasibility of random assignment to AV fistula or AV graft vascular access placement in older patients with advanced chronic kidney disease with no prior AV access intervention.
