The Bowerbird: October 2011

I remember being given an illustrated paper peep diorama at around seven years old and the magical feeling of climbing into a story in 3D. Get connected and especially if loneliness comes knocking. I was really thrilled to see two of my melamine plates featured in the latest magazine! And because he had listened so often to the gulls' cries, he was the one to hear when their screams spoke of fish.

Old Winkle and the Seagulls

Only Old winkle still goes out fishing, beyond the sandbank near the Great Buoy.

Old Winkle Seagulls by Rose Elizabeth

I already have a small collection of these style of Japanese mugs - but I'd never before come across any quite so intricate or patterned! The discarded chinaware is given a second life, crafted into collections of over-scaled jewellery and tongue-in-cheek wall plates, creating quirky nostalgic pieces with a modern twist. It also stocks recycled work by local designers, including , , and my collection of my wall plates.

FEATURED ILLUSTRATOR Suzanna Hubbard

A yew tree became a hideaway to live in, the old railway halt close by where the trains jolted on to Marylebone Station was without a doubt haunted. He won the 1960 from the , recognising the year's best children's book illustration by a.
