Liquidity Lost: The Governance of the Global Financial Crisis

Grabel concludes with a careful examination of the opportunities and risks associated with the evolutionary transformations underway. As far as expansion of its agenda is concerned, there have already been suggestions from its chairman and others that this would be desirable.

About the IMF Governance

For the Basel Committee, the long-term goal is resilient banks, which underpin safe and stable banking systems. As the name of this old Committee suggests, it was an ad hoc advisory body with no formal powers, which in turn succeeded the Committee of 20 that had been created in 1972 to undertake a major reform of the international monetary system, and which proposed the creation of a formal ministerial Council.

INTERNATIONAL MONETARY GOVERNANCE

- What do we mean by governance?
- Is governance of the international monetary system possible without a world government?
- Can global financial markets govern themselves?
- What is the role of the International Monetary Fund?
- Who controls the IMF?
- Can national governments collectively provide international governance?
- What is the role of the G-7?
- What is the role of the G-20?
- Is it true that "the system worked" during and after the crisis of 2008?
- Did the global financial crisis transform the international monetary system?
- Has the power of the United States in the monetary system been eclipsed by China?
- Has the crisis introduced "a new heterogeneity of thinking" about international monetary governance?

Making the Global Financial System Work For All

They virtually ignore the earlier, continuing efforts of the developing countries to interest the G-7 and other industrial countries in initiating a process of discussion of international financial governance issues that had at least some superficial similarities to the current G-20. Grabel draws on key theoretical commitments of Albert Hirschman to cement the case for the productivity of incoherence.

The Global Finance Regime

The committee has 24 members usually ministers of finance or development. It would also be useful for the staff of these institutions to be more diverse, not just in terms of nationality but also in terms of educational background and professional experience, as well as gender.
