XIII For when they ceased their ardent strain, Miss Kitty Glowed not with anger nor a kindred flame, But rather flushed with an odd sort of pity, Half matron's kindness, and half coquette's shame; Proud yet quite blameful, when she heard their ditty She gave her soul poetical expression, And being clever too, as she was pretty, From her high casement warbled this confession,— Half provocation and one half repression:— NOT YET Not yet, O friend, not yet! Did he preach—did he pray? The spine may show signs of wear.

To proceed:— Scarcely the year had flown. And the question goes round How the thing kem to pass? He who in Greece sang of flocks and flax and hemp,—he Here might recall them—six thousand feet on high! He mined on the bar Till he couldn't pay rates; He was smashed by a car When he tunneled with Bates; And right on the top of his trouble kem his wife and five kids from the States.
