How Will the Education Industry Look Like in the Future?

Looking from some of the greatest philosophers, poets, educators, historians, theologians, politicians, and world leaders, I found answers that should not only exist in our history books, but also remain at the core of current education dialogue. Schools, colleges, and universities will be compelled to determine how they can effectively leverage data to support and guide better learning outcomes.

9 Things That Will Shape The Future Of Education: What Learning Will Look Like In 20 Years?

In 2011, Coleman set out to make this a reality. Since more students will be learning and gathering information without attending school in person, future teachers will have to embrace various ways of staying connected and engaging with their students via social media, online communities, Google Hangouts, and more to stay connected with students.
