After Massachusetts voters elected her to the Senate in 2012, Warren was far more wary of media but used her new platform to stay loud. Geithner flew around the world responding to macro financial crises and then served as president of the New York Fed from 2003 to 2009. President Barack Obama, accompanied by Warren, right, and Geithner, left, announces in September 2010 from the White House Rose Garden that Warren will head the Consumer Financial Protection Bureau, which she helped to create, in an advisory role.
