The Victorian Public Sector

The first Victorian general Act dealing with local government was the Local Government Act 1874, which empowered shires to be established in territories that could financially support them, and boroughs to be established in areas not exceeding 9 square miles 23 km<sup>2</sup> with a population of at least 300. The consultant also analysed how many councils were achieving 'full technical efficiency', which is where a council delivers the highest possible number of outputs using available resources or uses the lowest amount of possible resources to deliver required outputs. We collated the past five years of available data from VGC, from 2012–13 to 2016–17.

Maddocks

Local councils have the same administrative functions and similar political structures, regardless of their classification. The Financial Plan and Asset Plan have a strong symbiotic two-way relationship and the interdependencies should be transparently recognised. Councils input data on corporate services inconsistently, and VGC does not monitor or address this issue.

Programmes

Administrative Offices Administrative offices are public service bodies that are distinct from departments, but have a reporting relationship to the departmental Secretary.

Integrated Strategic Planning and Reporting Framework :: Local Government Act 2020 :: Engage Victoria

Managers at Indigo advised us that the template was easy to use and that the process was beneficial for their services.

Structure planning

But there is no case for making one dependent on the other. Indigo and Wodonga maintain central responsibility of their reviews without a separate business unit, instead allocating responsibility for review processes and outcomes to existing leadership roles or groups. Redeployment process will commence from the date an employee is declared surplus.
